In announcing the many improvements in the 1935 Oldsmobile, Mr. C. L. McCuen, president of Oldsmobile, said:

"It is our belief that the purchaser of a new car is entitled to all that is new and better-all the important features that will make that car more desirable to drive and own. It is a basic Oldsmobile policy to give the public as soon as possible all the new things of proved value. We have therefore not only kept the improvements of 1934 but have added new safety, new beauty and new economy by the introduction on the new Oldsmobile of the latest engineering developments.
"And even with these new improvements. Oldsmobile will renain in the low price field with the new Six and continue in the lower medium price range with the new straight Eight. "Safety is becoming more and more important. We offer the pubic in 1935 two cars replete with safety features, led by the solid steel "turret top" body by Fish-

The new body introduces for the first time in modern automobile manufacturing the all-steel roof, serving three purposes:

First, the roof provides an extra margin of safety, heretofore unavailable in any car. Second, it adds greatly to the structural strength of the entire body. And third, it permits of beauty of line never before possible when the roof was covered with fabric ma-

The designers have obtained scientific streamlining which enhances beauty. The front is completely new, with narrow and higher radiator grilles, new radiator ornaments, new fenders and restyled hood louvers.

Headlamps are mounted on the radiator shell instead of on the fenders and are mounted on three steel supports instead of the cusomary two. The spare tire no onger is mounted outside but is concealed in the new spacious luggage compartment in the rear of the car. Luggage space is now prorided in standard models, and models with built-in trunks now have extra large carrying capacity.

The interiors of the new Oldsmobiles are smart and modern. The instrument panel, built of teel and integral with the body, this week. is given a modern treatment. Provision is made for the installation baby daughter of Morehouse and

SERVICE

Our world has been organized to depend upon Electricity. Nearly everything that we buy has in it the cost of power for its making: clothing, as well as hardware, lumber and all the rest that goes to construct our shelters and the preparation of foodstuffs by which we are nourished.

Having played so important a part in the production of the essentials of life, power continues to serve us in the work of our homes where in refrigeration, cooking, lighting, cleaning and the moving of countless devices that add to the ease and comfort of living it has become important. It is the great economic factor of today.

Then, combined with the power plant, the machinery that produces electricity there must be a HUMAN organization-an organization dedicated to service, ever ready day or night. There must be no stopping, no cessation of this service.

CHAPTER IX

Good-Bye Forever

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE

After Sonia has left him, Danilo is distracted. He loves her—and he focesn't even know her name! He feels he has lost his fift forever. He drowns his grief in champagne and in his frunkenness he discloses to the Maxim's beauties the reason for his visit to Paris. He has been commanded by his king to marry the rich Marshovian widow and so keep her fortune safe in the country. She, of course, knows nothing of this plan. The meeting between them has been arranged at the Embassy the next day. Danilo refuses to be presented to the widow because of his love for his unknown lady. The Ambassador forces him to meet her—and he discovers that the widow is Sonia—his Fifi of Maxim's. Today's chapter continues the story of their romance.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

They bent their brows to the task of deciphering it.

"Danilo gave secret away to Maxim girls," it read. "Secret all over Paris. Russian Ambassador here everything is lost. Therefore act quickly. Be brilliant. Meet crisis. Kill rumors. Admit nothing. Something must be done. Do it now. What are you waiting for?

(Signed)

The Ambassador let out a groan and rang for a lackey.

"Get Captain Danilo, right away."

he ordered. "He's in the garden."

with that, the Ambassador rushed into the main salon, muttering "Be Brilliant. Something must be done. Do it now." Several diplomats accosted him.

"Where's the charming widow?"

"Did you hear anything?" by a shead them fronticelly.

"It is a pleasure, Madame." "Is it?" she asked lightly.
"It's more, Madame. It's a thrill. Meeting you is the greatest thing that could happen to me. Madame may I ask a favor?" 'Shall I lift my veil?" asked Sonia, ironically.

"No, Madame. I don't jump over garden walls any more. Ambassador Popoff looked from our own Count Dathe Royal Guards."

"Since when?" she asked.

"Since yesterday." His voice who had been despatched to get the former, stopped in amazement. Sonia looked up at her lover. "How does he know? How does he know? How does he know but you and me?"

SERVICE

Our world has been organized to depend upon Electricity. Nearly everything that we buy has in it the cost of power for its making: clothing, as well as hardware, lumber and all the rest that goes to construct our shelters and the preparation of foodstuffs by which we are nourished.

Having played so important a part in the production of the essentials of life, power continues to serve us in the work of our homes where in refrigeration, cooking, lighting, cleaning and the moving of countless devices that add to the ease and comfort of living it has become important. It is the great economic factor of today.

CHAPTER IX

Good-Bye Forever

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE

After Sonia has left him, Danilo is distracted. He loves her—and he foesn't even know her name! He feels he has lost his Fift forever. He drowns has grief in champagne and in his grunkenness he discloses to the Maxim's beauties the reason for his visit to Paris. He has been commanded by his king to marry the rich Marshovian widow and so keep her fortune safe in the country. She, of course, knows nothing of this plan. The meeting between them has been arranged at the Embassy the next daye Danilo refuses to be presented to the widow because of his love for his unknown ady. The Ambassador forces him to meet her—and he discovers that the widow is Sonia—his Fift of Maxim's. Today's chapter continues the story of their romance.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The Ambassador the task of deciphering it.
